

ABSTRACT

In a crystal growth reactor, a source material having an etching action and a crystal growth source material are simultaneously supplied to a semiconductor wafer surface, so that residual impurities can be eliminated in an efficient manner by balancing etching rate and crystal growth rate.